The story of Christ is the story of divine love made flesh; and it is as part of this story, according to Dante, that any individual story might properly be told. Zanicelli, p. The respective openings of Inferno and Purgatorio suggest a deepening. This is already suggested by the fact that we are told that Hell is the creation not only of justice, power and wisdom, but also of love. With the coming of Christianity, baptism was imposed as a universal sacrament necessary to cleanse humans of original sin, and the virtuous pagans who lived in Christian times lack it. It is no longer a question of turning the body towards or away from some distant seems to indicate both purpose and prevision on his .
