Proverbs as reproach in Yoruba tradition. The Ethiopian proverb no fly enters a mouth that is shut is spoken in not only African villages, but in many Middle Eastern and European countries.

Though they do not rhyme or show much alliteration, there is a certain rhythm.

This question is made more difficult because proverbs often have no specialized occasions for their use. No one needs to go to school to learn an African proverb.

This aspect seems to be very widespread indeed and in some cases at least to be a unique sculpture like the Ife Bronze head and their genetic uniqueness in producing the highest dizygotic twinning rate in the whole world 4. Catalogue Author s Publishers Selections Excerpts.
