Quite a shift from the previous three installments? Figure 4 is the worst actually because only one data point is labeled and there are no units on the numerical values. In fact, the true statement that more men will be found in the extremes of behavior says absolutely nothing about any individual man or woman, and so the fact that men are more variable is of little use, especially political use.

I suspect that more women believe that men are better than women at math. Of course, and reviews What are comments?
