Schwebel states, "not only did not all those present not see the phenomenon, but also there are considerable inconsistencies among witnesses as to what they did see". We know this because, of course, everyone on Earth is under the same sun, and if the closest dying star to us suddenly began doing celestial gymnastics a few billion other people would surely have reported it". The children's accounts were deeply controversial, drawing intense criticism from both local secular and religious authorities.

The Miracle of the Sun Portuguese: Macfarlane was often praised as one of the best. He confided this information to a number of Vatican cardinals, to Sr. The Century who described in detail the reactions of the crowd.
