I like the character of Nick Mason. The detectives suspect that the Bocas are involved in some kind of criminal operation. Waitforme, Charlieeee. Nick has lost everything, and it's hard to have sympathy for. He must decide whether to continue to follow the orders he is being given, or follow his conscience and put his life, his freedom, and those who loves in jeopardy. The scenes with his daughter are especially poignant, but his attempts to lead a regular life are futile, even though he continues to delude himself into thinking he can still pull it off.

CharniersoonrealizeshewasobservedsincehisarrivalinNewYork.Aft the question becomes, can he survive?
