Themes and Colors Key. Reluctantly, the ghost allows an angel to crush the lizard, freeing the ghost from his burden to sexual desire.

The grey town could be interpreted as a version of Hell—a place for sinful souls. The Narrator sits on the bus, listening to the Trousle-Headed Poet for a very long time. You say that, and so of course does the reader who follows his caricatured words on the page. Her name on earth was Sarah Smith. The guy's imagination was just simply off-tune. It is not just that the saved souls in heaven are unable to help them, not that these souls do not meet some sort of halfway compromise with sin — the saved souls no longer even seem to have concepts of right or wrong.
