The presence of noncombatants in the AO further complicates operations. They require both detailed intelligence and deliberate planning. Commanders select avenues of approach that orient on key terrain and provide maneuver opportunities for attackers. Attackers pay particular attention to obstacles. Commanders execute violently without hesitation to break the enemy's will or destroy. The trapped enemy force is then destroyed. Offensive planning may occur while units defend. On 20 December SOF conducted the initial assault upon Panama Defense Forces. In large-scale operations, the enemy may attempt to mass combat power against an attack by moving forces from less active areas or committing reserves.
