The 13 Tales of Evil issue of Now Comics News announced that the popular film Fright Night was being spun off into a comic book series by Now Comics[1] a small publishing company that licensed a variety of popular television and movie characters and which had a reputation for being plagued by various financial and creative difficulties. Aiding Peter and Charley on their adventures are Charley's girlfriend, Natalia Hinnault, 13 Tales of Evil father has ties to the vampire underworld; Natalia's eccentric Aunt Claudia, who is the reincarnation of Greek Princess Ariadne ; and hapless bartender Derek Jones, who seems to have a magnetic attraction to unworldly beings—much to his chagrin. Peter and Charley have to deal with "brainbats" that are leeching onto people. They are short and pack a punch! Some things are scarier in your mind than on the page. Sneaking in story after story from Fright Before Christmas. Peter and Charley find themselves running through the marshes of New Orleans, trying to escape the titular legion of vampires. That kind of intro always suggests to me that we are in for a bit of Christmas themed Victorian bump-in-the-night whimsy.
