You see it not just in its architecture, infrastructure and connection to the wider world, but in its people: I can draw few connections with other cities built in the 20th century, which as a rule have turned out less well-connected and use space far less efficiently. Proudly powered by WordPress. Admittedly, I may be a little biased. In my junior year, an opportunity presented itself. And he would visit his late mother and sister who lived in Bridlington. By visiting my students in their homes, walking through their neighborhoods, and eating meals with their families, I gained respect, and a small glimpse into what their lives are like. These contrasts, for me, provide the distinctively satisfying texture of South Korean urban life. A bigger picture read more leave a comment. A smaller oil painting is like a wire sculpture. Sermon on the Mount however, is untypical – which is why Hockney was attracted to it. As I cycle along the Han River, the old-timer ahead of me – fully suited up in lycra riding gear – suddenly pulls over to gather roadside greens.
